

Conman, Shady Tipsters & Scammers

31 December 2015

I don't like the words tipping or tips when referring to horse races. I prefer to use words like selection/selections. This terminology suggests that at the least the writer has conducted some form of analysis prior to arriving at the final selection/selections. Whereas a tip is what you leave on the table at a restaurant as you're leaving.

I don't care much for tipsters either. Most have a terrible reputation because their strike rate and their Return on Investment (ROI) is woeful. Tipsters can offer up to four or five horses per race - and still lose. If they manage to get the winner in the say, top four, they never stop bragging about it.

All horse race tipsters that I'm of, also have other jobs - what does that tell you? It tells me these people can't make a living from their own tips. Therefore you can quickly conclude, neither will you. Most horse race tipsters target a gullible public to con them out of their hard-earned dollars. Avoid them as you would avoid a rabid dog. And, if you're wondering, I don't work for anyone.

I'm an investor - for me. I like that. It suits my lifestyle. Plus, I wrote a book. I don't charge for my selections. Why would I? Before I've distributed my selections email to those on my list, I've already put my bets on at fixed prices. Hence, I couldn't care less who else jumps on board and backs what I'm backing. I'm just happy to help.

I don't care at all for the con artists who sell computing software and racing systems under the pretext that they can pick winners and increase wealth. Trust me, no such beast has been invented. The crooks who peddle this shady merchandise should be jailed out of existence. Treat them as per the rabid dog before – avoid them.

In short, to make money from horseracing you must not be greedy. You will not win a million dollars overnight. It simply doesn't happen. To make money my way, you start with a small building bank and build it. Along the way, you take profits. You follow my advice and you'll do ok.

If you're on my distribution list for 2016, let the journey begin. If you're not, check out www.racestrat.com.au. It tells you how to join.
