Let's Do It Again in 2016

2015 – The Year That Was

For the first time in 8 years I took a loss. Although, we were starting to gain some traction towards the later part of 2015. That's racing as they say. Although, I wish it wouldn't happen to me.

Betting Approach for 2016

On 1st January 2016, I will commence betting operations with a $1,000.00 betting bank. The $1,000 betting bank is for transparency reasons on my website. I will email the selections to you by 1 pm on the day of the races, and by 6 pm for night racing.

For new subscribers: By emailing the selections to you pre-races, and then updating my results page post races, you will see there are no con tricks on my behalf. Honesty and transparency only.

Those with a smaller betting bank, than my $1,000.00 should scale down their bets accordingly. For example, if you're commencing with a $500.00 betting bank, bet 50% of what my email states. If you're commencing with a $100.00 betting bank, bet 10% of what my email states. Build your betting bank slowly. If you commence with a larger betting bank than $1,000.00, then you scale up. If you're commencing without a betting bank, you're a fool.

I take Fixed Prices with my selections. I currently use BET 365 for my betting. However, any online betting site who advertises on my website is ok. Just bear in mind, for all betting and results, the figures are based on Bet 365 Fixed Prices. Should you wish to open an account with BET 365, or any other online betting agency, please do so via my website. You'll get offered free bets and other incentives, etc.

The reason I only take Fixed Prices is because this allows me to set my bets to win a predetermined amount per race should any my selections win. With the initial $1,000.00 betting bank, I will be aiming to win $100.00 per race bet upon. If I can't get the prices I want, then I stay out of the race. I take two horses per race. For example:

Caulfield 6. Running Bear (3) @ 10.00 = $10.00 stake.

Caulfield 6. Quick as a Flash (5) @ 4.00 = $25.00 stake.

For a cost of $35.00, I have a return of $100.00 if either selection wins. From investing point of view, I have actually brought $100.00 for only $35.00. It doesn't get much simpler than this. As the betting bank increases, so will the stake.

Please Note:

1. I do not bet every day. I only bet when I think I can win the race. I practice patience, I find it's good for investing.
2. I never take odds-on prices.
3. I do not have fun bets. The business of making money is far too serious a business, to have fun. Save your fun for after the races.
4. As the betting bank increases, we will take profits. I'll explain more on this later.
5. I strongly recommend you do not deviate your betting approach from what I recommend. If you do exactly as I state in my email, then by rights on 31 December 2015, your betting bank should be the same as the one on my website, (assuming your initial betting bank was $1,000.00).
6. I do this for you for particularly nothing, in fact for the price of book. I handle constructive criticism well. However, I will not tolerate abuse. You abuse, I'll cut you straight off my email distribution list.

No doubt some of you take other bets, apart from just mine. To effectively judge my results, do not include your other bets with anything that comes from me. My results spreadsheet on my website will always be accurate for my betting, showing all loses and wins.

I hope the above clarifies and informs you sufficiently. If not, send me a note via my contact page on my website.

Now, bring on 1st January 2016 - let the journey begin.

Cheers

Hayden
